oil administered on an empty stomach. If those in charge of children are careful and prescribe in time they will find that carbonate of magnesia is an excellent aperient. It keeps well in a corked bottle. The best way to give magnesia to children is to put it on top of a little milk and let it fall through it; in this way it becomes quite smooth when well mixed. The usual dose of carbonate of magnesia for a child is a teaspoonful.-Woman's Life.
